Origins

The gramophone (phonograph) was first conceived by Charles Cros (1842-88), a French poet and scientist, who described his idea in sealed papers deposited in the French Academy of Sciences on 30 Apr 1877. However the realisation of a practical device was first achieved by Thomas Alva Edison (1847-1931) of the USA. The first successful wax cylinder machine was constructed by his mechanic, John Kruesi on 4-6 Dec 1877, demonstrated on 7 Dec and patented on 19 Feb 1878. The horizontal disc was introduced by Emile Berliner (1851-1929).

Oldest records

The BBC record library contains over 1,000,000 records, including 5250 with no known matrix. The oldest records in the library are white wax cylinders dating from 1888. The earliest commercial disc recording was manufactured in 1895. The world's largest private collection is believed to be that of Stan Kilarr (b. 1915) of Klamath Falls, Oregon with some 500,000.

Underwater violinist
The pioneer violinist to surmount the problems of playing the violin underwater was Mark Gottlieb. Submerged in Evergreen State College swimming bath in Olympia, Washington State in March 1975 he gave a submarine rendition of Handel's Water Music. His most intractable problem was his underwater detache. On 7 Oct 1979 the first underwater quartet performed in the Challenge the Guinness TV show on Channel 7 in Tokyo, Japan.

Earliest golden discs

The earliest recorded piece eventually to aggregate a total sale of a million copies was performances by Enrico Caruso (b. Naples, Italy, 1873, d. 2 Aug 1921) of the aria 'Vesti la giubba' ('On with the Motley') from the Opera I Pagliacci by Ruggiero Leoncavallo (1858-1919), the earliest version of which was recorded with him on 12 Nov. 1902.

Worst singer

While no agreement exists as to the identity of history's greatest singer, there is unanimity on the worst. The excursions of the soprano Florence Foster Jenkins (1868-1944) into lieder and even high coloratura culminated on 25 Oct 1944 in her sell-out concert at the Carnegie Hall, New York. The diva's (already high) high F was said to have been made higher in 1943 by a crash in a taxi. It is one of the tragedies of musicology that Madame Jenkins' Clavelitos, accompanied by Cosme McMoon, was never recorded for posterity.
